FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE

Nick Reynolds of Broomall, Delaware County, Launches NickReynoldsDelco.com — A Sourced Record of a Delco Life

BROOMALL, Pa. — Nick Reynolds, a Delaware County entrepreneur and former Marple Newtown, Millersville and Kean football standout, has launched NickReynoldsDelco.com, a living editorial record of his life told in his own words and backed source by source by published coverage and official records.

Reynolds is known in Delaware County for his work with Delco Steaks — named Philadelphia Magazine's 2021 Best of Philly winner for cheesesteaks and later served at the Wells Fargo Center for the Flyers and Sixers — along with DelcoLand, Splash Swim Club in Broomall, Marple Public House, Carangi Baking Company, and government energy-aggregation programs in New Jersey.

On the field, newspaper records document a 1997 senior season at Marple Newtown with 168 solo tackles and 20 total touchdowns (18 offense, 1 defense, 1 special teams), 384 high-school career solo tackles, and 31 college sacks across Millersville and Kean, including 12 sacks for Kean in 2002. Marple Newtown Football now presents the Nick Reynolds Iron Man Award.

“A life can't be explained in a headline,” Reynolds writes on the site. “This is the story — from my own mouth.”

Every entry on NickReynoldsDelco.com names its publisher and date, carries an original summary, and links to the original source. The site's chapters cover family and faith, athletics, business, music, writing and Delco.

About Nick Reynolds

Nick Reynolds lives in Broomall, Delaware County, Pennsylvania. He is a graduate of Marple Newtown High School and attended Millersville University of Pennsylvania and Kean University.

Media resources: https://nickreynoldsdelco.com/press
###